Know the Laws

By FRED CROSTER

"Another season, another reason", for not making 'Whoopie', we'll leave that to the Welsh team, out in Japan, but for continued explanations on these laws which make our game seem so complicated to some.

Supporters will know that the rugby law makers are the International Board, with Hermas Evans and Ken Harris the Welsh representatives. The major rugby playing countries are represented except, alas, France. It's about time that they were once again.

This august body meets once yearly. Usually after the England v. Scotland Calcutta Cup match by tradition. This was broken last year when they met in Australia as part of that country's anniversary celebrations and again this year when they met in Dublin last March under the chairmanship of Cliff Wilton, from Scotland.

To the delight, I am sure, of just about everybody, and that certainly includes me, the laws were left practically untouched with, obviously, many resolutions discussed including the by now hardy annual from Wales, seeking that the 'Mark' be discontinued.

The only change, and it's a minor one, relates to 'accidental offside'. This now reads:

"If play is not interfered with by accidental offside play, by one player touching a member of his own side, it will be allowed to continue."

This is left to the discretion of the referee. This must always be so.

NEXT HOME MATCHES

Wednesday, 10th September v. BRISTOL (K.O. 7.15 p.m.)

Saturday, 13th September v. BLACKHEATH (K.O. 3 p.m.)

Wednesday, 24th September v. ABERAVON (K.O. 7.15 p.m.)
