Cardiff v. Neath

SATURDAY, MARCH 5th, 1994

KICK-OFF 2.30 p.m.

NOT ONLY the followers of Cardiff and Neath will be watching anxiously the proceedings at the Arms Park this afternoon. With the Heineken League championship so delicately poised, the players and supporters of Swansea, the current table-toppers who are at home to Bridgend today, and Pontypridd, who visit Newport, will view the result here with great interest.

On paper at least, Neath might appear to have the best chance but, quite apart from today, they also have difficult away matches at Swansea and Llanelli to come. Pontypridd, the dark horses and the in-form team of the moment, still have to travel to Swansea.

The season could, indeed, go to that last Saturday, April 30, before this year's champions are known. On that day, Swansea come to the Arms Park, Pontypridd go to Aberavon and Llanelli entertain Neath, whose players, officials and followers we welcome most warmly this afternoon.

That last game will be an all-action replay for the two teams because they have this week been drawn together in the quarter-finals of the SWALEC Cup: someone, in short, will have a score to settle and Llanelli, while arguably out of the championship race and concentrating on the cup, will still have a major say in the league also.

With the quarter-finals in mind, spare a thought for Cardiff fixtures secretary John Evans. Last Saturday's defeat of Bridgend, whilst very welcome, presented considerable problems for Easter Saturday, April 2, the date designated by the WRU for the quarter-final matches.

Easter Saturday, of course, is traditionally the day on which Cardiff play the Barbarians and Cardiff had already sought permission, if needed, to play a quarter-final match on another day. Nor were the South Wales Police unhappy to change dates. And if Cardiff were not in the quarter-finals but the Barbarians were unable to tour — the Pilkington Cup semi-finals are being played on the same day — then the Wasps would be happy to come to the Arms Park.

The Police fear that all time-off will have to be cancelled because of the Swansea City-Cardiff City soccer match that day also — an event which would not only have stripped them of a potential team but also affected possibly Pontypridd (with Richie Collins and Greg Prosser), Llanelli (Emyr Lewis) and others. But they would have preferred Easter Monday.

This would have meant Cardiff fielding perhaps a moderate side against the Barbarians to avoid injury. No final decision has yet been made; watch this space, as they say.

Nor are these busy times merely for administrators. Many players, too, have other major considerations. Those involved in the possibility of a Grand Slam — and this includes supporters also — will be itching for news from Paris where France are playing England this afternoon. Twickenham, here we come...

Still, it's the nitty-gritty of the League which is concerning us for the moment. In the seven meetings between Cardiff and Neath in the League to date, Neath hold the upper hand with four victories. Cardiff have won twice with one draw.

In the complete series between the clubs since we first met way back in January 1879, Cardiff have won 113 of the 197 played, Neath 66 and there have been 18 draws. Cardiff have scored 2117 points in that time and Neath 1550.

There have been during that time some memorable matches and, in welcoming once more everyone from the Gnoll with their familiar chant, although we might seek a reverse of result from our October visit to the west, we hope above all for an enjoyable afternoon.

GUEST APPEARANCE

STEPHEN JONES, Rugby Correspondent of the Sunday Times, is unashamedly a Newport supporter. He tries to keep this bias out of his writing and sometimes even forgives Cardiff when there is a

CHANCE OF THE 'SLAM'

I HAVE ALWAYS urged my colleague, Paul Rees of the South Wales Echo, to maintain professional standards and the ethos of journalism by keeping out of his reporting any indication that he is a supporter of Cardiff RFC — just as I have always managed to hide the fact in my writing that I am an equally fervent supporter of Newport.

While Rees always struggles in this respect, I have no problem whatsoever in seeing rugby history in a balanced light — especially in discussing the outrageously fortuitous Cardiff victories over touring teams; their achievements, totally undeserved, in beating Newport four times in a season on several occasions (what can you do with refs like that); their lack of contribution to Wales teams; also the glorious Newport Cup win of 1977, all the similar achievements in the proud history of the greatest club in Wales. And they did it without a secret underground tunnel leading to other clubs.

Balance, Reesy. That is what you must have.

Indeed, there is absolutely nothing wrong with Cardiff that a sudden flash flood and tidal wave from the Taff would not put right.

However, even I am coming round. For a start, with the news of tidy trust funds being set up for the Cardiff players, I am now in full training for a dramatic comeback. Second, in certain circumstances, I am prepared to unite with Cardiff supporters in the common cause against the old enemy — no, Reesy, not Newport; England! I am quite prepared for the winning try to be scored by Nigel Walker or any other Cardiff player.

And when the dust had settled on last week's internationals at Cardiff and Twickenham, the whole shape of the season had changed. To be frank, until those matches I had never been able to see Wales winning at Twickenham. Never mind how big their revival, it seemed that they would travel only on a damage limitation exercise. I underestimated the excellence of Messrs. Davies, Norster, Jenkins and their colleagues.

And I diminished the profitability of Mr. Rupert Murdoch's newspapers, if only by a tiny margin. I had an open line from the Twickenham press box to Cardiff. It is exceedingly difficult covering an international rugby match as it is. When you are covering it while punching the air at random moments, it becomes almost impossible.

Before we get too excited, we should remember that England have the basis of a good team and that they played the Irish without their best player — Ben Clarke. Bath's back row man is so influential that his club are eight points worse off without him, and his country about the same. They still have great strength in depth.

But Twickenham is winnable. If England continue to play into the hands of the opposition and play the solid, but slow-off-the-mark Rob Andrew, if their backs continue to play as if treading in treacle, and if the likes of Martin Bayfield fail to resume their progress, then Twickenham is winnable. And from no-where, Wales have the Grand Slam. Nice thought, but not to be harboured too strongly until the final whistle.

But win or lose, things are moving, at last, in the right direction. The evidence was there for every English follower to see last Sunday. Rugby Special's English version showed the four Pilkington Cup matches. Apart from a few typical thrusts from Bath, the play was turgid, slow, dreadful. Suddenly, they switched to Wales for the highlights of Pontypridd-Swansea. It was as if someone had thrown the fast forward button. Here was action. It was fast, hard, aggressive, entertaining. It was a class above and for Welsh eyes, it was compelling and encouraging.

So perhaps we have turned the corner. Perhaps Paul Rees and myself will find more on which to agree.

On second thoughts...

QUIDNUNC'S COLUMN

GANG WARFARE, soccer hooliganism, meetings with young ladies of ill repute, even murder... any one or combination of these seedier aspects of Cardiff life are likely to be a part of a day in the activities of one of the newer faces on the Arms Park scene.

For John Donald Marshall Wakeford (quite a mouthful, that, but there was a time when it required three initials to make the Welsh team: TGR (Davies), RWR (Gravelle), RCC (Thomas), JPR (Williams) et al) is the "area officer" for the Riverside area.

"Community policeman" is the phrase most of us would use and that describes well John Wakeford's job: his patch may include some of the more seamier of Cardiff's citizens — even our picture from the Bridgend match (left) shows him with some unsavoury characters — but he loves it.

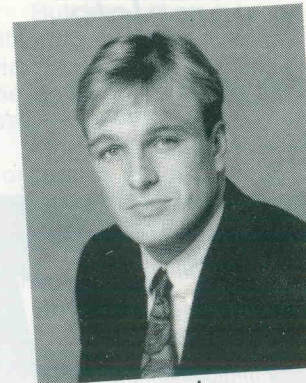

Not least because there are within his bounds a number of Chinese restaurants, food which he relishes. "And I know what goes on in their kitchens," he says sagely. Which is why he comes up with the Riverside Cantonese as his favourite — though in the past there have been rumours of Triad infiltration into some of those on his beat.

John, incidentally, is particularly hoping to play this afternoon because it was while playing at Neath for South Wales Police at the Gnoll in November 1992 that he received such severe leg injuries — torn ligaments — that he was

This in no way dampened his ambition to add to the two caps he had won earlier. "I was," he will explain tongue in cheek, "in the last Welsh side to beat Western Samoa but then, alas, in my second international we were beaten by Roumania."

The end result of this ambition was his decision to move to Cardiff in December as fitness returned and, he says, he is learning with each training session under Alec Evans and Charlie Faulkner. "I do not think I have yet played to my best form with Cardiff," he says, "but I do feel I am working up to that best and I want to get noticed again."

And because he is so happy in the job on Riverside he may perhaps concentrate more on rugby in the next two or three years than on seeking advancement in the police force.

"Rugby is a short career, the police longer term with the result that I am determined to get back in that red jersey. I will get better..."

John is still so new to the Cardiff fold that he has yet to collect a nickname. Many of the senior players, including those villains who are prepared if necessary to invent stories and nicknames for Quidnunc's exclusive use, have been perforce on international duty and have not turned their creative thoughts his way.

Nor, yet, has he felt the full force of the Alex Evans tongue. He has, then, some treats in store.

"Wakey," is one name thrust on him. "Wakey, wakey" may yet become even more appropriate because John Donald Marshall Wakeford, known hereafter as JDM, admits he is a bit of a gentle giant.

His eventual arrival at the Arms Park was perhaps inevitable because JDM is a Cardiff boy, born here, educated through the infant and junior school of Bishop of Llandaff before moving to the senior school and becoming its first — and only — Welsh cap.

But his father was at one time chairman of the rugby committee at Glamorgan Wanderers and it was there that JDM, apart from school, first played. Joining the Police as a cadet at the age of 16, he then came up through the police rugby ranks to win Wales Youth and B Caps before playing for Wales.

Married to an Ely girl, Sandra, JDM takes life fairly seriously, as befits a policeman. Predictably, perhaps, he used to enjoy Morse on television, he is not musical but enjoys Phil Collins, Elton John and Genesis, would if necessary sing Saturday Night at the Movies as one of the Drifters, and reads avidly anything to do with serial killers (one of his ambitions is to 'nail' the Geraldine killer).

On duty recently at the Cardiff City-Luton Town cup-tie, he was struck on the back of the head by a lump of concrete thrown by a yob — but he still prefers life on Riverside to, say, the community beat at Lisvane.

"I may be surrounded by Chinese, Somalis, Vietnamese, Asians, the red light district and gay bars, Parachute clubs and so on but I'd rather that — they're real characters, a lot of them — than helping old ladies with trapped cats in Lisvane," he says.

Surely those erudite glory-boy backs can come up with a decent nickname for JDM in view of that lot?

MISCELLANY... reporting on news

YOUTHFUL PROGRESS

HAVING SHED its unbeaten record by losing to Cheltenham, the Cardiff Youth side has more important things on its mind.

Tomorrow, they travel to Treorchy (kick-off 2.30) to play in the quarter-finals of the Welsh Youth Cup.

Several of the team have received honours. Stephen Gardner, Andrew Grabham and Richard Field, for example, have played for the Welsh Schools Under 18s against France, Scotland and the Welsh Under 18 Youth team when they came up against their teammates Jason Campbell and Andrew Fowler.

At the beginning of April, the lads are off to Cork for a two-match tour – and they have been assisted with funds from the highly successful race night organised by the Supporters Club.

INTERNATIONAL TICKETS?

TICKETS for Twickenham in a fortnight are clearly in short supply but there is a chance for other Welsh matches if you move quickly.

Members planning to watch and seek tickets for either of the World Cup qualifying games v. Portugal in Lisbon on May 17 or in Madrid against Spain on May 21 – can apply to the Hon Sec John Nelson.

Written applications only, please – and by Monday.

TENSE TIMES

THIS AFTERNOON'S other First Division matches see some crucial meetings as the season's championship and relegation dramas come closer.

At the top, Swansea are at home to Bridgend while Pontypridd travel to Newport and Llanelli to Newbridge. At the other end of the table, Dunvant meet their fellow strugglers Cross Keys while Pontypool travel to Aberavon.

In the Second Division, Treorchy can confirm promotion if they beat Penarth who are threatened with relegation while bottom club Glamorgan Wanderers who are putting together some good results are at home to South Wales Police.

and views from CARDIFF ARMS PARK

OUR PHOTOGRAPH of an impressive, even formidable, group of ladies is shown as the result of a letter hon. sec. John Nelson received from a Mr David Dwyer, of Bootham, York, a fourth year student of PE at the University College of Ripon and York St John who is researching the History of Women's Rugby Union for his honours dissertation. He had found reference to women's rugby being played at the Arms Park between Cardiff and Newport in 1913.

John Nelson believes he must be referring to a match on December 15, 1917, played for war charities and at which the above picture was taken and is kept in the club museum. The contestants, reported Danny Davies in his book Cardiff Rugby Club "were Cardiff ladies who were mainly employees of Hancocks Ltd, the noted Cardiff brewers, and Newport ladies who were employees of the Lysaght works in the town."

The teams changed in the Grand Hotel in Westgate Street, under the patronage of "Ma" Rosser and the Cardiff captain was Miss E. Kirton, well known as an employee at the Grand. Oh, yes: Newport won 6-0.

KNOW THE LAWS

J. E. MALCOLM THOMAS
looks at an area of the game which can puzzle spectators,
players – and referees

THE STATIONARY RUCK

The stationary ruck is usually formed from the tackle situation, whereby players from both sides come into contact, as in a maul situation which then collapses.

The stationary ruck can cause serious problems, unless it is refereed firmly and accurately. What should the referee look for?

1. As with most phases of the game referees must arrive quickly to the ruck situation. The referee should establish quickly the position of the ball. He should penalise opposition players who are prepared to kill or obstruct the ball. I have frequently noticed that players involved in a tackle often move quickly from the ball or place it quickly when support from their team arrives immediately and a dynamic ruck passes over them. However, the same players are often reluctant to comply when they are defending tacklers, unlikely to win ball, often lying on the opponents' side of the tackle in order to prevent rucking. Referees should note this and penalise accordingly.
2. The intention must be to work "the ball" out not an opponent. Actions of players' feet who go in and down in a vertical direction, should register immediately with the referee. They are not necessarily going for the ball and this can result in foul play. The stationary vertical foot movement must be penalised and recognised to be different from the action of rucking – i.e., with the toe of the boot, studs facing own goal and a backward action of the foot. Indeed the law prevents striking, hacking, kicking, tripping and trampling.
3. When the ball is unsighted by the referee, the referee should blow quickly to prevent serious or dangerous foul play.
4. Referees should position themselves carefully. They are advised to face the ball and the non-ball winning players at all times.
5. But they should also remember that the same law should apply to both sides – defending as well as attacking. Some referee on the assumption that the team going forward can do no wrong and the defending team can do no right

LLANDAFF'S LUKE... TODAY'S MASCOT

FOR THE SECOND week in succession, by coincidence, it's a lad who plays his rugby at Llandaff who is the Match Mascot today (and another Llandaff man is featured in Quidnunc). Nine-year-old Luke Gaffney, who will lead out the team, with Mike Hall this afternoon, also lists a Llandaff person — well, Llandaff North anyhow — as his favourite player in Mike Rayer. Luke plays outside-half for Llandaff Under 10s, centre for Cardiff at that age group, and goes to St Joseph's. He lives in Heath and is a regular ball boy at Cardiff.

THINKING OF GOING TO PONTYPOOL?

THE JUNIOR Blue and Blacks Club is planning a special coach to take members and parents to Pontypool to support the team on March 26 (costs £3 for adults and £1.50 for children). If you are interested, contact Steve, Karl or Richard after today's match. The coach, incidentally, will leave at 1 p.m.

SUGGESTION BOX

YOUR VIEWS on the Junior Blue and Blacks Club are welcome. How do you think it has gone this season? What would you like to see next season? Steve, Karl and Richard would like to hear your ideas. Why not jot them down on paper and let us have them?

MASCOTS AND BALL BOYS

Our thanks to the ball boys for all their efforts during the season. To qualify for becoming either a ball boy or a match mascot, you simply have to be a member of the Junior Blue and Blacks Club — and, in the case of Match Mascots, to be lucky in the draw.

TODAY'S COMPETITION SPONSOR IS...

Read first this extract from an unpublished book:

"At least one need not look for depth in the shallow end where it is chillier and where we are estimating four oysters will be found. Keep awake for, depending on it and a prayer, you may save your life. Then a limo or even bigger car will come for you unless, maybe, vandals have wrecked it..."

Hidden among the words are the surnames of nine regular Cardiff players. Find them... and hand them in after the match for the chance of a prize.

THANKS...

...AS ALWAYS to Fields Lab Ltd. for their continued support and help towards the Junior Blue and Blacks Club.

HANCOCKS HB

Hancocks HB is and always has been one of the most popular cask ales in Wales. As the 'HB' on the handpump suggests, it has been 'Home Brewed' in Cardiff since 1886.

HB's clean, crisp taste and delicate hoppiness has gained it a reputation as a refreshing, flavoursome pint which goes down well anytime.
